2023 LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENT NOMINATION: BRUCE WAGMAN

1. Describe the nominee's body of work and length of time working consistently, visibly, and persistently to address a cause, issue, or discipline.

For almost three decades, Bruce Wagman has worked tirelessly on animal welfare, applying world-class legal expertise and a pioneering focus to benefit both humans and animals. Living in Marin, Bruce is recognized as the leading animal lawyer in the U.S. and the only one running an animal law practice at a major US law firm. Bruce drafts and litigates animal welfare legislation, consults on rescue operations, and advises and represents organizations who care for and protect animals. His work covers a broad range of animal-related legal issues, including all forms of animal cruelty, the use of animals in entertainment, biomedical research, animal agriculture/food production, and wildlife control. He is revered for successfully tackling some of the toughest problems in these fields.

Bruce wrote the two leading books on animal law and teaches at three law schools in California. He actively participates on multiple boards and spends much of his time on pro bono animal protection cases. He has served on the board of Marin Humane for many years (a total of 15 years with a break between terms) and on the Advocacy Committee for even longer. He is our subject matter expert on legal cases, education, and advocacy efforts. Bruce negotiated the release of chimpanzees from multiple biomedical research laboratories and founded an organization to provide chimpanzees permanent sanctuary. He is cofounder and outside counsel for California's "Shelter Pals," the only program in the nation providing free legal aid to animal shelters.

Bruce, a longtime resident of Stinson Beach, walks the talk. He is vegan, has adopted multiple animals from Marin Humane, and generously donates funds to numerous other animal organizations. Much of his legacy also includes the time and volunteer hours his late wife, Deborah, gave to Marin Humane's Pen Pals program at San Quentin and Behavior & Training program, and their dedicated work together with the chimp organizations. While he is fierce in the courtroom, he's compassionate and non-judgmental outside of it, striving to meet people where they are. He is professional, humble, and highly ethical. We at Marin Humane are inspired by him.

Bruce is a voice for the voiceless, a true gem of Marin, changing the world one student at a time, one case at a time. We are lucky to have him working, living, and advocating in our community for many years and a Heart of Marin Lifetime Achievement award would be richly deserved.

2. How have they addressed or advanced the cause, issue, or discipline? Provide up to three specific examples, with dates of occurrence, of the nominee's significant contributions (i.e., strategy, teaching, program design, approaches, etc.).

Example #1: Many years as an educator

Bruce recognizes that education is a key driver of change in animal welfare. He teaches animal law at three Bay Area law schools and has inspired hundreds of students (160+ animal law courses in 30 years).

- University of California, San Francisco - Hastings College of the Law, Animal Law, (1996-present) Adjunct Professor of Law
- University of California, Berkeley - Berkeley Law, Animal Law, (2004-present) Adjunct Professor of Law
- Stanford Law School, Animal Law (2006-present) Lecturer

Bruce is the co-author of two legal books that are primary references used by multiple generations of law students, animal welfare experts, advocates, and organizations.

- Animal Law: Cases and Materials (2000, 6th edition 2019)—The leading animal law casebook for law schools nationwide.
- A Worldview of Animal Law (2011)—The only global survey of animal law.

Bruce teaches animal law to Marin veterinarians, provides animal welfare updates to Marin Humane staff, and has taught animal control officers statewide at California Animal Welfare Association (CalAnimals) workshops in northern and southern California.

Example #2: Pioneering litigation

After attending an American Bar Association session on animal rights in San Francisco in 1992, Bruce decided to change paths and become a lawyer focused on animals. Since then, he has done much to create and expand the category of animal law, litigating a wide range of crucial cases aimed at protecting animals, including:

- Representing Marin Humane pro bono in 2012, after it rescued four neglected horses from a local farm in what became a long and litigious process to secure the horses' safety.
- Upholding the shark fin ban in California.
- Ensuring Endangered Species Act Protection for gray wolves in the Western Great Lakes states.
- Regulating poultry slaughter line speeds to protect both chickens and workers.
- Stopping commercial horse slaughter for human consumption.
- Litigating numerous animal hoarding cases.
- Leading multiple cases representing captive primates.

This small sampling of Bruce's cases demonstrates that he has a long history of success in "impact litigation" that requires creative application of the law to represent the rights of animals.

Example #3: Important legislation

Prop 12, which was passed by CA voters by an historic margin in 2018, prohibits cruel confinement for farm animals. Bruce repeatedly defended the law in 2019, 2020 and 2021 against challenges from the North American Meat Institute and the National Pork Producers Council. Bruce's work cleared the way for Prop 12 to take effect on January 1, 2022, providing more humane housing for millions of farm animals. In March 2022, challenges to California's law were brought to the Supreme Court and Bruce worked tirelessly on the case seven days a week. The Supreme Court reviewed challenges by the National Pork Producers Council on October 10, 2022.

On May 12, 2023, the U.S. Supreme Court justices upheld California's ballot initiative that banned in-state sales of pork born from sows kept in confined housing. "Having followed the Prop 12 triumphs and challenges for many years, the finality of this ruling is incredibly satisfying. Bruce, I can only imagine the relief and joy this brings you. It is still incredible to believe that it took this much time and effort to give farm animals the right to be able to lie down, stand up, turn around and fully extend their limbs. Thank you, thank you, thank you Bruce for all your hard work and the passion you brought to this case." Email to Bruce Wagman and the Marin Humane Board of Directors from Robin Rodi, DVM, on hearing the news about the Supreme Court ruling.

3. How has the nominee prioritized diversity, equity, inclusion, and belonging in addressing a cause, issue, or discipline? Please provide specific examples.

Bruce's work over the past several years has focused in part on legislative and policy work to expand access to veterinary care to underserved and traditionally disregarded communities throughout California. He has been involved in work to provide lifesaving vaccines and sterilization procedures for pets in those communities, as well as to bring programs directed at increasing the likelihood of those communities to be able to keep their pets at home.

4. Describe the nominee's leadership history, such as participation on committees or workgroups, with examples of contributions that addressed their cause, issue, or discipline.

Bruce does significant pro bono work, both in his legal practice and for several nonprofits where he serves on boards and committees. He joined Marin Humane's board in 2007, termed off in 2015 and then was re-elected in 2017. Prior to 2007 Bruce joined its Advocacy Committee and continues to serve on it today. Bruce is a consummate board member, knowledgeable about board roles and best practices, offering guidance when needed, donating consistently, and fostering opportunities for Marin Humane to partner with other groups. He goes out of his way to recognize the hard work done by staff and sends vegan treats to the shelter on a regular basis to say thank you. He also generously invites both staff and board members on private tours of the Ano Nuevo elephant seal sanctuary each year.

Bruce was a founding board member of two national chimp sanctuary organizations, Project Chimps and Chimpanzee Sanctuary Northwest, and supports both by using the law to free chimps from federal testing labs to live at these sanctuaries. Bruce is also a board member and adviser to United States Equine Rescue League, Front Range Equine Rescue, Big Cat Sanctuary Alliance, and the American Bar Association Animal Law Committee since its inception, over a decade ago.

Bruce helped found California's Shelter PALS, the country's first and only legal aid organization dedicated exclusively to the needs of animal shelters. As chief counsel, Bruce and his team provide free resources and legal aid to animal shelters hoping to help improve equity across shelters and improve outcomes for animals. They also draft and promote precedent-setting animal welfare legislation.

Bruce is actively involved in working with CalAnimals, the state's animal welfare organization representing shelters across California. "Bruce Wagman is an exceptional attorney with an unmatched depth of experience in matters related to animals and specifically animal shelters. Bruce provides regular counsel to shelters statewide on a myriad of issues related to their work, and is a regular presenter on our CalAnimals webinars, helping organizations better understand state laws. These webinars are among the highest attended (usually 300 or more attendees) because they are so critically important to our work. While we can't always see Bruce on the screen due to the tabby cat that enthusiastically parades in front of his camera, he is one of our most popular and engaging presenters. Bruce is also exceptionally helpful as we evaluate legislation and is very prompt to assist when legal challenges arise that affect our work. We are profoundly grateful for his assistance and expertise and the incredible difference he is making for animal welfare in our state." Jill Tucker, CEO, CalAnimals.

With Bruce's leadership, Marin Humane is working on a special project to build a better outdoor dog training and exercise space at San Quentin Prison for our Pen Pals program. This will be a vast improvement for all the Pen Pals participants – the inmate dog handlers, the dogs temporarily staying at San Quentin, and our staff who come in twice a week to oversee the program. Working in partnership with a state-run correctional facility to get a budget and a design approved in order to proceed to construction inside prison walls is a challenge. Bruce, however, is a lead funder and cheerleader for us; he will be a key reason our Pen Pals program will have significantly more room for work with the shelter dogs, the first major physical improvement to the program since it was established in 2005.

More recently, Bruce is assisting 270 animal shelters, animal control agencies, and other animal welfare organizations with interpreting a California appellate decision from September that makes it mandatory for shelters to release animals deemed dangerous or potentially dangerous (dogs with significant bite history) to rescue organizations, putting the public safety at risk. Bruce made the time to summarize the key takeaways from this decision. He also worked on filing a letter, signed by several organizations including Marin Humane, encouraging the court to rehear the case. A response from the Court of Appeals is expected later this month.

5. How does the nominee's story inspire others to higher standards or raise awareness? (i.e., policy change, lives touched, systems, culture, etc.).

How this Brooklyn-born, former ER nurse received a law degree from Hastings College of the Law in 1991 and then became one of the first animal law experts is fodder for a great novel and has inspired many students and animal advocates who have been in Bruce's classrooms, workshops, board meetings, or in state and federal courts.

Bruce's passion for animals and the law has changed the minds and lives of many individuals, including his students over 30 years of teaching and many members of the public – of all cultures -- with respect to the treatment of animals in agriculture, entertainment, and the methods of killing wildlife. He has been a leader in the progress towards developing a more humane world for animals, both in Marin and nationwide. His rescue of biomedical and entertainment chimpanzees and formation of sanctuaries to provide lifetime care for them has inspired, raised awareness of the plight of chimpanzees, and changed the way people think about them.

One of Bruce's greatest impacts was in 2013 when horse breeders quietly moved their neglected horses into a remote area in Marin to avoid rumored legal actions in a neighboring county. Marin Humane investigated reports about the chronically neglected horses who lacked food, shelter, and veterinary care for serious injuries and seized four of them, providing evidence to the Marin County DA's office. The opposing attorneys repeatedly pursued legal action against Marin Humane, but Bruce stepped in and worked countless hours pro bono, recruiting additional pro bono support from one of California's largest law firms based on his compelling legal arguments and sterling reputation. With Bruce's representation, Marin Humane defeated every legal challenge and was able to keep the horses protected from abuse and neglect. Had this representation not been provided pro bono, it could have cost Marin Humane well over a million dollars in legal fees! This case remains a key example of how Marin County upholds the highest standards of animal welfare in the country.

In a 2005 Berkeleyan article Bruce expanded on his approach to animal law: "It's based on a moral imperative," declares Wagman. "That's why I do what I do. I can't fathom not doing what I do - I feel like there's no higher calling than to try to save or rescue the suffering of all these innocent beings our society has decided are disposable."

"Bruce's words have taught me that any gesture I do, whether big or small, makes a difference. His work, my work, Marin Humane...all of us are in this together," explains Suzanne Gollin, Marin Humane Foster Parent Coordinator.

Marin's Bruce Wagman is a towering figure in the law, a driving force for animal welfare at the county, state and national levels, and a tremendous example of Marin at its best.

A. Notable Cases
B. Awards/Honors
C. List of publications/presentations

A. Notable legal cases:

- Supreme Court of the United States: National Pork Producers Council and the American Farm Bureau Federation v. Ross (Secretary of CA Dept. Food & Ag),the Humane Society of the United States; Animal Legal Defense Fund; Animal Outlook; Animal Equality; The Humane League: Farm Sanctuary; Compassion in World Farming and the Humane League. Oral argument heard on 10/11/22.

  On May 12, 2023, the U.S. Supreme Court handed down an opinion that represents a decisive victory for animals, people, and the rule of law. Affirming the decisions of lower courts, the Supreme Court decisively stopped an attempt to halt California's Prop 12, which prohibits the in-state sale of pork products from pigs confined in a cruel manner and passed with 63% of the vote in 2018.

  The law specifically requires cage-free and crate-free housing for all veal calves, mother pigs, and egg-laying hens raised in California and mandates that any veal, pork, or eggs produced elsewhere and sold in California must come from farms meeting these higher-welfare standards.

•Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) vs. United States Fish and Wildlife Service: Obtained affirmance by the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals of federal Endangered Species Act protection for gray wolves in the Western Great Lakes states, upholding a federal court ruling stating the wolves' delisting was illegal.

•National Meat Association v. Brown (U.S. Supreme Court) –Defended California law requiring humane treatment of animals too sick or injured to stand or walk.

•Humane Society of the United States v. Jewell–obtained order vacating the federal government's decision to remove endangered species protection for gray wolves in the Western Great Lakes.

•Statutory defense–Bruce has been involved in the defense of several animal protection statutes including laws protecting wildlife, animals raised for food, sharks, and dogs and cats.

•Front Range Equine Rescue v. Vilsack–Obtained temporary restraining order preventing the initiation of commercial horse slaughter for human consumption.

•Front Range Equine Rescue v. Jewell–Sued federal government for dangerous and untested surgical sterilization "research" on wild mares; in response, federal agency dropped the program

•Chimpanzee Sanctuary Northwest and Project Chimps–Negotiated release of chimpanzees from biomedical research laboratories, and founding member of board of directors providing the chimpanzees permanent sanctuary in Georgia and Washington State.

•Animal Legal Defense Fund v. Woodley–Using unique North Carolina law, ALDF successfully sued animal abusers, resulting in the rescue of approximately 350 dogs and 21 birds from an animal hoarder who kept the dogs warehoused in squalid conditions.

•Chesley Morton et al. v. Georgia Department of Agriculture–Oversaw team that sued the state of Georgia Department of Agriculture to enforce Georgia's Humane Euthanasia Act and help put an end to the illegal and inhumane gassing of domestic animals in Georgia's animal shelters.

•Chimps, Inc. v. Primarily Primates–Represented two sanctuaries and fought for and obtained permanent homes for nine gibbons and two chimpanzees that had been taken from a situation where they were exposed to daily neglect and cruelty.
